Publishing today is not limited to paper and ink. With current technology, it is possible to create and distribute published content that will never be seen on a printed page.

We are committed to exploring these new publishing technologies, and have always been quick to implement them and offer them to our clients.

We design and create Interactive PDFs, e-publishing, e-newsletters, e-flyers, e-stories or any other format through which the design can visualise your content.

Fostering sustainable consumption and production patterns and integrated waste management strategies

In a blue-green economy,landers are encouraged to make more sustainable consumer choices through renting, lending or sharing services as an alternative to owning products and consumer interests are safeguarded in terms of costs, protection, information, contract terms, and insurance aspects. Policies are implemented to incentivize and support waste avoidance, reduction and high-quality separation by collectors, to put in place collection systems that minimize the costs of recycling and reuse, to develop shared maintenance and repair services, to encourage industrial symbiosis by facilitating the clustering of activities.

KENYA'S WAR ON IVORY TRADE, PRESIDENT UHURU URGES

President Uhuru Kenyatta has urged the world to back the country's call for a total ban on illegal ivory trade. This comes a month after President Kenyatta presided over the burning of more than 105 million worth of ivory.

A major contributor of the global food system is under threat. In the future the world is to combat hunger, use natural resources.

A new report has indicated that seven million people die every year from air pollution. The report further highlights that the situation could become worse as global air quality declines.

Global Wildlife Programme to Fight Global Wildlife Poaching and Trafficking Crisis

Kenya is expected to benefit from the £500 million Global Wildlife Programme to fight global wildlife poaching and trafficking crisis.

ILO leads the other Participating UN Organizations (PUNOs) in this priority area to ensure that targeted public and private sector institutions, women's organizations, cooperatives/groups/networks are in place to increase women’s access to economic opportunities.

The Government of Kenya – UN Joint Programme on Gender Equality and Women’s Empowerment (JP GEWE) is working on the following key results under its priority area of Economic Empowerment:

- Key institutions providing appropriate/sustainable business development and financial services for women entrepreneurs.
- Vocational training and other key Business Development Institutions providing increased skills’ transfer for women in modern and appropriate technologies in target districts.
- Increased membership of relevant/effective networks/clusters addressing business and market opportunities for both female and male entrepreneurs in target provinces.

Key Achievements

- Strong joint programming and identification of women’s groups in target areas – based on each agency's comparative advantage – UNIDO, ILO, UNODC and UN Women.
- Market linkages for women entrepreneurs enhanced through set up of 11 District Business Solution Centres.
- 2 women led marketing cooperatives established and functional in rural Kenya. 90 women leaders benefited from sales from these cooperatives in six months.
- District Business Solution Centres (DBSC) trained 4,775 entrepreneurs from Kitui, Garissa, Meru South, Muranga, Bando, Siaya, Bungoma, Kisumu, Nakuru, Eldoret and Kitale.
- 500 Young women entrepreneurs trained in entrepreneurship and IT education through 10 Hewlett Packard (HP) Centres.
- The trainings on Rain Water Harvesting have engaged 110 women and 10 men.
- 36 women have started generating an income from the HabiHut Kiosks (solar powered water selling kiosks).

"PUNOs continued to work effectively to enhance women’s economic empowerment in Kenya. The interventions reached over 14,535 direct beneficiaries in 2012."

JP GEWE Annual Report 2012

In Harmony with the ocean

I spend most of my free time by the sea, it is amazing the relationship that man have with the ocean. In Seychelles the ocean is our main source of food and its beauty gives a perfect venue for “tourism”. We need to live in a harmony to sustain this wonderful gift. My artwork represents my island and visitors enjoying in the ocean rich with marine life. It is a marine park fishermen respect this; it is a kind of relationship that should save the ocean for generations to come.

Increased threats to African elephants resulting from the illegal killing of elephants, illegal trade in ivory, human-elephant conflicts, loss and fragmentation of habitats jeopardize their protection and harmonious coexistence with humans.

To address these alarming concerns, the African elephant range States have formulated strategies for the conservation and management of elephants, known as the African Elephant Action Plan.

Concerted efforts are being made by the African elephant range States, the United Nations Environment Programme, the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES) and its Monitoring of Illegal Killing of Elephants (MIKE) programme to carry out the African Elephant Action Plan and ensure a secure future for the African elephants and their habitats.

The African Elephant Fund was created to support the African Elephant Action Plan in carrying out strategies for protecting and restoring elephant populations and their habitats where possible.

The elephant population is dwindling, by almost 8 per cent every year. Yet the outlook for elephants has improved in the past decade, owing to the efforts of governments, communities and the private sector. This report is designed to share, inform and hopefully inspire a wide variety of readers on innovative approaches to improve the quality of life for elephants and their stakeholders. It was certain that strong leadership and strong governance would be needed to effect such change.

Governments are in the best position to make key decisions that affect the fate of elephants. However, only elected officials can be held accountable for their actions, and the role of mayors - as closest level of governance to the people - to improve the quality of life for elephants is vital. The report aims to provide elected officials with an understanding of the situation, and to ensure that they are prepared to work with their peers and stakeholders to develop and implement effective policies and solutions.

In April 2014, the 11 signatory countries of the Agreement on the Conservation of African Elephant (the Agreement) met in Malawi to review the implementation of the Agreement. The 11 signatory countries are the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Kenya, Malawi, Mozambique, Nigeria, Tanzania, Zambia, Congo, South Africa, Rwanda and South Sudan. On 31 January 2014, the Kenya and the Republic of the Congo signed the Agreement for the Peace, Security and Prosperity of the Great Lakes region, making the Agreement the first regional agreement of its kind to be fully implemented. This peace agreement has the potential to bring stability to a region that has been plagued by conflict and violence for decades. The agreement was fully implemented, this peace agreement has the potential to bring stability to a region that has been plagued by conflict and violence for decades. The agreement was signed by the leaders of the 11 signatory countries in April 2014, and it provides a framework for cooperation and coordination on African elephant conservation.

African elephants are a keystone species, and their conservation is vital to the health of ecosystems. The elephants' presence brings biodiversity, ecotourism, and other benefits to communities. The elephants are also a symbol of the continent’s cultural and natural heritage. The elephant populations have been declining, but there is hope for the future. The report aims to provide a comprehensive overview of the current status of elephants and their conservation efforts, and to inspire action to ensure their survival.

What we do

Originally established as an in-house print shop and distribution service, UNON Publishing Services Section has evolved into the focal point for publishing services at the United Nations Offices at Nairobi. Today we provide a wide-range of services while playing an integral part in the daily production of publications for U.N. Organizations domiciled on the Gigiri compound. We can arrange work up to 24/7 to ensure that your publishing needs are met in a cost-effective and timely manner. We operate using state-of-the-art and modern equipment. We have made many advances in the use of eco-friendly materials and practices. In recent years we have introduced new technologies, including print-on-demand printing, computer-to-plate pre-press, and digital publishing. We have been an ISO 14001 certified operation since October of 2014.

UNON Printshop is a full-service design and print office that provides all the services that an organization needs under one roof including:

- Folders
- Business cards
- Invitation cards
- Flyers
- Newsletters
- Info-graphics
- Summaries
- Publications
- Reports
- Logos
- Notepads
- Diaries
- Calendars, wall planners, desk calendars
- Binding and training materials
Success for your project, whether it is a publication that needs to be printed, or a USB drive that needs to be duplicated, is rooted in a sound understanding of the publishing process. The publishing process can be complex, and in some cases a sizeable component of your project’s resources, in both time and funds. The following is an overview of the main components of the publishing process that relate to printing and distribution.

Consultation

The first step is to contact us and speak with us about your needs. At that time we will provide you with different options specific to your project. For example, if your project is a print job we will discuss paper, color, and finishing options. Once you have defined your needs, we will prepare an estimate of the costs and time that it will take to complete your project.

Key items to consider at this stage

- Select the best format for your project, based on goals, audience, budget, schedule and other requirements,
- Designate a project manager who can move the project along and make changes if necessary.
- Finalize financial arrangements with the section so that work can begin (clickable text that will open a new window with an example of a D1 form of link to UNON Documents control and or iDCPMS).
